Bali Art Markets

Bali art markets offer unique shopping experiences, where you can discover a treasure trove of artworks and handicrafts by talented local craftsmen, all at bargain prices. Most of the art markets in Bali comprise a sprawling scene of small kiosks arranged within a semi-open-air complex, though some arrange their stalls within a dedicated building.

All of these markets draw both local and international shoppers looking for a great deal on unique motif batiks, intricate Balinese carvings, and iconic knick-knacks you won't find outside the island. Even if you aren't in for the haggling or buying anything, a visit to any of these art markets provides you with a glimpse into the wonderful artistry and creativity of the island's craftsmen. (source: hotels.com)

Jalan Pantai Kuta

KUTA WALKING STREET

As one of Kuta's main streets that interconnects several other pathways and shortcuts, Jalan Pantai Kuta is perhaps the most recognisable walking street. Half of it even runs parallel to the namesake beach. The 1-way street follows on from where Legian's primary nightlife and shopping street, Jalan Legian, ends. It starts from the so-called 'Bemo corner' intersection, where you can find many small souvenir shops, spas and art kiosks.

Although you're most likely to start on the sands of Kuta Beach, the half-length of the street that runs up to the beach is worth exploring too, with its mix of local art shops, jewellery boutiques, international surf brand outlets and cafés. (source: hotels.com)

Seminyak Village

Seminyak Village is a modern shopping destination that graces one tucked-away corner of Bali's upscale beach resort area. Seminyak has long been known as a shopper's paradise, with its main streets lined with a mix of international and local designer boutiques and galleries, but this shopping hotspot tops the scene as Seminyak's only proper mall.

Seminyak Village is tucked well away on a side street between famous Jalan Kayu Aya dining street and the luxury villa neighbourhood of Jalan Kayu Jati. It houses popular fashion brands spread throughout its 2-storey arcade.
